The passage below has five errors. Find them and correct them.

The Romans made the first rules for traffic. When they were drive, they stay on the left hand side of the road. They made rules for parking. And they introduced one way streets. Many years later, in Britain, drunk driving became illegal. In 1865 Britain introduced the first speed limit. It was 6.4 kilometers per hour. The United States introduced the first electric traffic lights in 1918.

Things are different now. When we is driving, we have speed limits of 100 kilometers per hour. There are thousands of traffic lights around the world. However, it is still illegal to drive when you are drunk.

Fifty years from now, maybe we will driving in the air. Or maybe we won't be drive at all. Maybe we will be beaming ourselves where we want to go, just like on Star Trek!
